Seasoned enterprise sales leader joins Anterix as utilities and critical infrastructure industries invest in secure, resilient communications

WOODLAND PARK, N.J., May 27, 2026 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Anterix (NASDAQ: ATEX), the market leader in enabling mission-critical private wireless broadband networks, today announced the appointment of Kim Green-Kerr as Chief Revenue Officer. She joins Anterix as utilities and critical infrastructure operators accelerate investment in connectivity to run a more intelligent, automated grid.

Green-Kerr arrives at a pivotal moment for the sector, as rising electricity demand, AI-driven grid complexity, and the rapid expansion of distributed energy resources are converging to make secure, real-time operational connectivity a strategic imperative. In her role, Green-Kerr will lead Anterix's commercial organization and go-to-market strategy – deepening customer engagement, accelerating adoption, and scaling Anterix's role as the foundational infrastructure for modernization.

"Kim is joining Anterix at a defining moment for both our company and the industry," said Scott Lang, President and CEO of Anterix. "The question is no longer whether critical infrastructure operators will adopt private wireless – it's how fast they can deploy it. Kim brings the commercial leadership and customer-first focus to convert demand into deployments and extend our lead."

Green-Kerr most recently served as Senior Vice President of Enterprise Sales and Operations at UScellular, where she drove growth across enterprise and government markets and strengthened the company's position in utilities and critical infrastructure. She previously spent more than two decades at Sprint, culminating as Senior Vice President of Business Solutions, where she led a nationwide organization of over 2,000 sales professionals across business segments.

"Critical infrastructure operators are under pressure like never before, and they're demanding communications they can control and count on for decades," said Kim Green-Kerr, Chief Revenue Officer of Anterix. "Anterix has built the market position, customer base, and portfolio to lead this transformation. I'm excited to turn that momentum into deeper partnerships, broader adoption, and durable growth."
